PREFACE.

THE almost universal possession of at least a good common-school education by members of the Society of Friends, is generally conceded. Among the establishments in America which have contributed to this, Westtown Boarding School occupies a prominent position. Most of the families of Friends within the limits of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, and many in surrounding parts, have each contributed one or more to swell the number of students; in many cases all the members have in succession passed some portion of time at the institution. And such is its age, that those who now assemble within its walls are the grandchildren of those first enrolled as students. Patronized thus extensively, it has also served another important purpose. It has been a point of common interest to all classes, and the acquaintances there formed by those just on the threshold of active life, have bound together in closer union the members from distant sections of the country. To those with whom the name of Westtown has thus become very familiar, who retain pleasant recollections of the time spent there, and who wish to possess, in a form convenient for reference, most of the accessible information relating to the School, it is hoped the present compilation will prove acceptable.

The short history, prepared by the aid of some members of the committee in charge of the institution, will be found to chronicle the important events, in connection with the origin and progress of the concern, and the means by which the school attained its present condition. In the preparation of other matter included in the volume, the records in possession of the book-keeper and librarian were resorted to. With what degree of correctness these were kept in past times, will be best known should these pages meet the eyes of those who alone are competent to verify the entries,—the many whose names are herein enrolled. Care has been taken to follow the records in all essential particulars.

The use of register numbers is peculiar to Westtown, but the system is so well understood by its patrons, that it was believed no other order of arrangement would serve so well in a work of this kind. It corresponds generally with the chronological order, and most persons will turn readily to their own entries. It is to be regretted that a more uniform policy was not pursued at all times in the assignment of numbers. In the earlier years of the school, students returning after an absence, in some cases received new numbers. From this cause, the highest register number issued does not indicate truly the number of different persons entered. These re-admissions, when known to the compiler, were omitted in the second instance, and a summary on page 289 shows the result.

To obviate all difficulty in finding particular names, as well as to group together those of one family name, a complete alphabetical index has been added. In cases where students have in after years been connected with the school as officers or otherwise, the same has been indicated by reference in the index.

Only those who have attempted a labor of this kind can realize the difficulty experienced in regard to the spelling of many names. In the space of seventy years, some families change the spelling slightly, or a branch but distantly related may adopt a different spelling as a distinction, or names pronounced exactly alike, but spelled differently, may lead to confusion in many ways. Hence, it will not be surprising if persons bearing the name of Baily (Bailey), Ballinger (Ballenger), Evans (Evens), Lea (Lee), Philips (Phillips), Swain (Swayne), Eayre (Eyre), or any one of a score of other like doubtful names, will notice a spelling unlike that generally used by them.

The frontispiece, although most of the large trees in the vicinity have been omitted, in order to show the buildings, will yet, it is hoped, convey a tolerably correct impression of the place, and show to those who have not visited it since 1869–70 the location of the boys' school-building.

The compiler wishes to express his obligation to many Friends for encouragement and assistance in the prosecution of the labor. Especially is he indebted to the present Superintendent and Matron, whose extensive acquaintance with those connected with the school for many years past, rendered their advice and assistance peculiarly valuable.

The result of many days' pleasant employment is herewith submitted, hoping that The History and General Catalogue of Westtown School may suggest to many the thought of how much they owe to the institution in its past, and at the same time tend to perpetuate that degree of interest which will insure its usefulness in the future.

INTRODUCTION.

EDUCATION AMONG EARLY FRIENDS.

THE ministry of George Fox began in the year 1647. Only a short time elapsed before those who came to have a common bond of interest in the adoption of the doctrines he taught, turned their attention to the care and instruction of the youth. A history of the educational movement in the Society of Friends would, therefore, cover nearly the same period as the history of the Society itself. To what extent private schools were established and patronized at that early day, we know not. In the journal of George Fox, under date of 1667, occurs the following (page 409):

"I advised the setting up of a school there (at Waltham) for teaching boys; also a woman's school to be opened at Shackelwell for instructing girls and young maidens in whatsoever things were civil and useful in the creation."

This advice seems to have been at once acted upon. In four years from that time there were reported to be fifteen boarding schools in operation. These, of course, were small, and became wholly insufficient, as the number to be taught increased.

London Yearly Meeting strove to impress upon both subordinate meetings and individuals the importance of providing for the education of the children of Friends in schools under the care of members of the Society. From 1700 to 1740 there were earnest appeals, issued by that body annually, in reference to their literary as well as religious instruction. The following is the advice of the Yearly Meeting in 1706:

"And forasmuch as, next to our own souls, our children and offspring are the most immediate objects of our care and concern, it is tenderly recommended to all that are or may be parents or guardians of children, that they be diligently exercised in this care and concern for the education of those committed to their charge; that, in their tender years, they may be brought to a sense of God, — his wisdom, power, omnipresence, so as to beget an awe and fear of Him in their hearts (which is the beginning of wisdom); and, as they grow up in capacity, to acquaint them with and bring them up in the frequent reading of the Scriptures of Truth, and also to instruct them in the great love of God, through Jesus Christ and the work of salvation by Him, and of sanctification through His blessed Spirit; and also to keep them out of the vain and foolish ways of the world, and in plainness of language, habit, and behaviour, that, being thus instructed in the way of the Lord when they are young, they may not forget it when they are old."

Some of the difficulties of a later day are shadowed forth in the following extract:

"The want of proper persons among Friends — qualified for schoolmasters — has been the occasion of great damage to the Society in many places.

"We desire Friends would, in their monthly meetings, assist young men of low circumstances, whose genius and conduct may be suitable for that office, with the means requisite to obtain the proper qualifications; and, when so qualified, afford them the necessary encouragement for their support." (Minutes London Yearly Meeting, 1715.)

A particular description of the various efforts made in compliance with the oft expressed concern of London Yearly Meeting will not be here attempted. They finally resulted in the establishment of a national boarding school at Ackworth in 1779. This institution, through the liberality and constant care of Friends, was made an instrument of great good to the youth of the Society. It continues in operation at the present time. The number of scholars admitted since its commencement in 1779, to 1871, was 8,753.

Should any one query what kind of an education early Friends desired for their children, abundant material for an answer could be found in the recorded minutes of that period. While they, in common with all other classes, were satisfied with a course of study very much shorter than that now considered essential, it cannot be denied that the prevailing standard was a liberal one. When we view the subject in connection with the state of schools among other classes, their plan of education seems surprisingly broad and practical. An emphatically religious education was desired — an education, which, while it made the mind the receptacle of such human wisdom as would conduce to the greatest usefulness upon earth, encouraged that obedience to the manifestations of Divine grace which would restrain and bring under right control the natural propensities of the child. That which puffeth up was to find no place, while that which teaches the accountability that must attach to all human action, and the due subordination of all desires and feelings to the one great end of man's existence on earth, was to be the corner-stone of the system. The spirit which animated many, is shown in the advice to parents to "be good examples in all things, as become men and women professing godliness, that good footsteps may be left by us to future generations, which may be helpful to the preservation of those who succeed us in the right way of the Lord." (Lon. Y. M. Epistle, 1712.)

In 1682, a considerable number of Friends arrived in America, and founded the colony of which Philadelphia was the centre. The first mention of schools was at a meeting of a council in Philadelphia, held 18th of Tenth month, 1683, at which time, it is easy to imagine, the settlers were not all comfortably housed. The following is the minute:

"The Governor (William Penn) and council, having taken into their serious consideration the necessity there is for the instruction and sober education of youth in the town of Philadelphia, sent for Enoch Flower, an inhabitant of said town, who, for twenty years past, hath been exercised in that care and employment in England, to whom having communicated their minds, he embraced it upon the following terms:

"To learn to read English, . . .	4*s.* by the quarter.
" " " " and write . . .	6*s.* "	"
" " " " " " and cast accounts	8*s.* "	"

"For boarding a scholar, that is to say, diet, washing, lodging, and schooling, £10 for one whole year."

Six years later, the "Friends' Public School," in Philadelphia, was opened. This was regularly incorporated by Deputy-Governor Markham in 1697; and afterward confirmed by fresh patent from William Penn himself, the final one bearing date Eleventh month

29th, 1711. The objects of the corporation are thus stated:

"Whereas, The prosperity and welfare of any people depend in great measure upon the good education of youth and their early introduction into the principles of true religion and virtue, and qualifying them to serve their country and themselves, by breeding them in reading, writing, and learning of languages, and useful arts and science, suitable to their age, sex, and degree, which cannot be effected in any manner so well as by erecting public schools for the purposes aforesaid," &c.

George Keith, formerly of Aberdeen, in Scotland, was employed as teacher. He was followed, at the end of a year, by his usher, Thomas Makin, who is described as having been a "good Latinist." Several schools have been maintained, and are still in operation, under the provisions of the original charter.

The following, from Smith's "History of Delaware County, Pa.," is of interest in this connection:

"Friends now (1692) began to give their attention to the subject of schools. At a monthly meeting, held at Darby the 7th of the Seventh month, it was agreed 'that Benjamin Clift is to teach scoole, Beging^{e} ye 12th of ye 7th m^{o}.; and to continue one whole yeare, except 2 weekes.' The annual salary of this worthy teacher, as appears by an agreement for employing him another year, was but £12. He probably boarded with his employers." (Page 183.)

Thus early did the subject claim the attention of Friends in America; nor were the efforts confined to a few localities. Schools were established in various places, and their improvement made a subject of special and frequent care, both by individuals and meetings

Difficulty was experienced in procuring suitable teachers, and, we may readily suppose, the schools, when established, were not always such as satisfied concerned parents. Philadelphia Yearly Meeting Minutes, in 1746, say:

"We desire you, in your several Monthly Meetings, to encourage and assist each other in the settlement and support of schools for the instruction of your children, at least to read and write, and some further useful learning to such whose circumstances will permit it; and that you observe as much as possible, to employ such masters and mistresses as are concerned, not only to instruct your children in their learning, but are likewise careful, in the wisdom of God, and a spirit of meekness, gradually to bring them to the knowledge of their duty to God and one with another; and, we doubt not, such endeavors will be blessed with success."

The same body, a few years after, still further advised, that "The most likely means to induce 'religious prudent persons' to undertake the business of teaching, would be to provide a certain and stated income, for such persons, by the establishment of funds for the purpose. In 1777 the 'consideration of the sorrowful complaint of deficiency in the religious care and education of the youth, brought up from Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting, was entered upon;' and the minute, then made, states, that 'a lively concern impressed our minds for the advancement of righteousness and the real benefit of the rising generation, both with respect to their pious education in Friends' families and also their school education.'"

The subject rested with weight upon the minds of many, and the exercise of the meeting, at that time, resulted in the appointment of a committee of fourteen Friends, "to take the matter relating to the youth and their religious education and schooling particularly under their care, and give such advice and assistance therein, and respecting other deficiencies, as they in the wisdom of Truth may see expedient."

This committee deemed it right to issue an epistle upon the subject, and from their report the following is taken:

"It is the opinion of the committee that Friends having united with others in employing such persons for masters, who have not submitted to the operation of Truth, hath had a tendency to strengthen a disposition in our youth, to avoid the cross and unite with the spirit of the world, whereby many hurtful and corrupt things have gained ground amongst us."

After alluding to the concern manifested upon the same subject for many years previous, and the fact, that, "notwithstanding these pressing recommendations, little has been effectually done therein,"—after proposing that it should be again urged upon the attention of subordinate meetings,—they conclude:

"We, also, think it necessary that this weighty concern should, in future, become the continued care of the Quarterly Meetings by an annual query, that so the matter may rest on a solid foundation, and every possible encouragement and assistance may be afforded to Friends in the settlement of schools, procuring masters, &c., through the whole extent of the Yearly Meeting."

It was also recommended:

"First, That a lot of ground be provided in each monthly or preparative meeting, sufficient for a garden, orchard, grass for a cow, &c., and a suitable house erected thereon. Second, That funds be raised by contribution, bequests, &c., in each meeting; the interest of which to be applied either in aid of the tutor's salary, or lessening the expense of Friends in straitened circumstances, in the education of their children. Third, That a committee be appointed in each monthly or preparative meeting, to have the care of schools, and the funds for their support, and that no tutor be employed but with their consent."

Some years after (1783), upon receipt of reports from the Quarterly Meetings, the Minutes say:

"Though in divers places some care has been taken, school-houses built, and schools instituted under care of Monthly Meetings, importing a degree of promising progress; yet respecting other parts, it is acknowledged that little improvement has been made, not much having been done toward establishing permanent funds for the regular and liberal support of schools, under well qualified, discreet, and religious instructors." *

* It should be borne in mind that the period to which these Minutes refer was one of great unsettlement, owing to the Revolutionary contest, and the political agitations growing out of it.

THE HISTORY

CHAPTER I.

1790 — 1805.

ABOUT the year 1790, the propriety of establishing a boarding school began to arrest attention. A tract put forth by Owen Biddle in this year, — rehearsing some facts in the experience of Friends in England, and discussing, at some length, the adaptation of a large boarding school to the needs of the youth of the Society in this country, — probably contributed to ripen the concern in the minds of many Friends. In the Fourth month, 1791, the subject was introduced into Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, from whence, after some months' deliberation, the subject was carried to the Quarterly Meeting. That body, in the succeeding year, introduced the subject into the Yearly Meeting. Effort on the part of individuals had already resulted in the formation of a fund of several thousand pounds in aid of the enterprise when it should be undertaken.

A subject of the magnitude of that now brought before the Yearly Meeting, of course, required much consideration before action could be taken. It was successively referred to the meetings held in 1793 and 1794. In the latter meeting a large committee was appointed to take the whole subject into consideration,—consult with such Friends as had for a length of time had the matter weightily on their minds,—and report their united judgment when ready. At a subsequent sitting they made a report, from which the following is extracted:

"On taking the subject into deliberate consideration, we are united in the sentiment that an institution of the kind proposed, if managed with religious care and circumspection, may tend to the prosperity of Truth by promoting the real good of the rising generation; we do, therefore, recommend the said proposal from the Quarterly Meeting of Philadelphia, to the patronage of the Yearly Meeting, and propose that a committee thereof be appointed to consider and digest a plan and rules for the government and management of the house, school, and other parts of the economy," &c.

They proposed that the said committee should be the agents for carrying out the concern, and should report regularly their progress. The Meeting agreeing to this, a standing committee of forty-seven Friends was appointed, as recommended. The women's Yearly Meeting appointed seven of their number to join with men Friends in the service as occasion might require.

The men Friends thus appointed held their first meeting for deliberation on the evening of the 3d of Tenth month, 1794, in the old Fourth Street Meeting-House.* Thomas Morris was chosen clerk, and Thomas

Fisher, treasurer. A sub-committee was appointed to solicit further subscriptions. The selection of a site for the proposed institution was one of the first subjects to be decided. Some of the members, whose attention had already been turned to this, proposed a tract of land on the Neshamony Creek, some miles below Bristol, in Bucks County, containing about four hundred and fifty acres, known as Langhorne Park. This land was indeed purchased by a few Friends in the expectation that it would be selected for the purpose. A delegation was sent to view this spot, as well as any others, thought more likely to answer the end designed. After visiting various places, they expressed themselves in favor of selecting the farm of James Gibbons in Westtown township, Chester County, as the one in all respects best adapted to the purpose. This land, about six hundred acres in extent, was accordingly purchased. The amount paid James Gibbons was £6,083 6*s.* 8*d.* = $16,222.22. A small sum was expended to obtain the entire water-power of Chester Creek. This was accomplished by buying the adjoining farm on the west side, and selling with a reservation of the entire water privilege. At the time of purchase only a small portion of the farm had been cleared; not only that which is timbered at the present day, but much of that which has since been brought under cultivation, was then covered by a dense growth of forest-trees, of a size and age now represented by a few trees in the "South woods." Near the present site of the farm-house stood the dwelling known in those days as the "Mansion house." This was repaired and soon after occupied. Edward Churchman was the first tenant. Preparations were at once made for erecting a saw-mill. This was completed by the end of the year 1795, and afforded the means of preparing the lumber to be used in the future buildings. This mill and dam in the creek were near the northern line of the farm, and the curious may yet see the remains of the latter, and the race which wound around the western base of Walnut Hill, to the spot where the mill was situated.

Meanwhile the selection of a site for the main building occupied the attention of the committee. By agreement, several members met at the farm on the 17th of the Eighth month, 1795. Their report says, they "viewed the eminence north of the Mansion house remarkable for the fine prospect it affords." Judging this to be the right place, the exact front was staked out. It was the original design to make the main front parallel "to the new road from Marlborough Street road to the Goshen township road." But a south-eastern front was afterward decided upon. In the following spring a barn was built near the farm-house; and arrangements were made for the burning of bricks for the school-building, — a plentiful supply of clay for which, as well as of good building-stone, exists on the farm.

The plan of the building was a subject requiring careful consideration; and it was only after much labor had been expended that one was agreed upon. The generally prevailing opinion was, that accommodations should be provided for one hundred and fifty students and the requisite number of teachers, &c. For this a building, one hundred feet long and fifty-six wide, three stories in height, was thought to be sufficient. Special care was taken that an extension could be readily made, if circumstances should render it desirable in after-years. The sub-committee intrusted with the oversight of the work of building were David Evans, Jonathan Evans, Thomas Morris, Philip Price, Jr., Daniel Thomas, Samuel Canby, James Marshall, John Talbot, Eli Yarnall, and Abram Sharpless. The work progressed steadily from the time of its beginning in 1796 to the period of its completion in 1799. If it should occur to any that the time thus occupied was long, it must be remembered that builders had not, then, all the modern facilities at their command, and material was not to be had in a complete state of preparation at short notice. Those of the committee, who resided in or near Philadelphia, had a carriage, or horse-back ride, of twenty miles, in order to get to the scene of their labors. The expenditure of time on their part must therefore have been considerable.

The building thus slowly constructed has proved to be of a very substantial character, and although the floors in some places, and other parts of the wood-work, have, in the seventy years that have since elapsed, required renewal, yet the walls still bear witness to the care which was exercised in the selection of the materials and the thoroughness of the work.

During the erection of the building, roads were laid out, a garden was enclosed, furniture obtained for the school-rooms, and other preparations made for the accommodation of its future inmates.

The total expense of the improvements thus made, including a new barn at the farm-house, general repairs, fencing, &c., increased the total cost of the premises by the year 1802 to $46,020.19. An inspection of the books of the Institution shows that the total amount expended up to the year 1870, in the further enlargements of the main building, the erection of additional structures, alterations, repairs, and permanent improvements generally, to the buildings and upon the farm, forms an aggregate of $228,335.36.

In the Yearly Meeting which convened near the close of 9th mo., 1796, report was made of the transactions up to that period, in the progress of the building, the condition of the farm, and the exhausted state of the funds. Some "constitutional rules," also, were presented at the same time, describing several of the main features in the organization of the proposed establishment. The first of these defined the nature and powers of the standing committee to have the permanent care of the school. Others made provision for a superintendent under the direction of the acting committee, for meetings for worship in the house on First and Fifth days, for the support of discipline by the officers, aided, when needful, by the acting committee, &c. Some of these "rules" were as follows:

"That spelling, reading, writing, arithmetic, and book-keeping, shall be taught in the different schools, and such other useful branches of learning as the circumstances of the pupils may require, and the state of the Institution shall permit."

"That the board and lodging of the children shall be plain and frugal, without distinction, except in cases of sickness."

"That boys and girls be accommodated in separate apartments under care of separate tutors."

"That no tutors, assistants, or domestics, be retained in the Institution, whose deportment is not sober and exemplary."

"That no children shall be taken in under the age of eight years, or entered for less than one year."

"That if children are sent with clothing not sufficiently plain as to color, or which shall require washing, it shall be returned; but if the make only be exceptionable, it shall be altered and the expense charged."

The meeting also took measures to replenish the funds, and strengthen the hands of the committee. As the house progressed toward completion, other details began to receive attention. Efforts were made to engage teachers, though with only partial success at first, and especial difficulty was found in procuring men Friends who were qualified for the service. A report in 1799 says:

"Encouragement hath, however, been derived from the free and disinterested offer of our Friends, Richard and Hannah Hartshorne, to devote their time and attention to the oversight of the general order and management of the house and its appendages."

These Friends, who were the first superintendents, entered on their duties in the early part of the year 1799. Women Friends interested themselves to good purpose in procuring beds, bedding, and many other articles requisite in housekeeping. The books, opened for the purpose, contained in 4th mo., 1799, the names of seventy-three boys and sixty girls, applicants for admission; but, from the difficulty of starting at once into successful operation with a full house, it was concluded to begin with a much smaller number, and to admit at first only twenty of each sex. This number was to be increased by ten of each sex monthly, if it was found to be advisable. The price of board and tuition was fixed at £24 per annum = $64; it being decided to put it at this low price, in order that the charge should not be an obstacle "in depriving any proper objects of the benefit intended."

The school was opened on the 6th of 5th mo., 1799, with John Forsythe, Elizabeth Bellerby, and Phebe Cox as teachers. Some members of the committee were also present, as appears by the following extract from the Minutes:

"Our Friends, Samuel Smith and John Cox, being willing to devote a portion of their time for this purpose, their dedication to the service is very acceptable to the committee, and they are encouraged to attend as soon after the school shall be opened as is convenient to them. Rebecca Archer, having agreed to attend, and it being hoped that Rebecca Jones and Ann Lloyd may also find it their duty to give up to unite with the two men Friends above mentioned."

It would be interesting to know more of those eventful days, the 6th and 7th of the month, when most of the forty pupils were arriving and finding places in the new institution. Busy days they doubtless were, as it is scarcely possible but that even the most careful foresight had failed to secure every needed arrangement, and many times the officers found themselves poorly provided with facilities for their work. A glance at the list of students will show who the first admissions were. One of them, William Evans, late of Philadelphia, makes the following mention of his early experiences at the school. (See Journal of William Evans, p. 8.)

"In the Fifth month, 1799, the boarding school at Westtown, instituted by our Yearly Meeting, was open for the reception of scholars, and I was one of the first twenty admitted there, my brother Joseph also remaining a few months. It was quite a novel scene, and required time before a proper system of order and government was established. Everything seemed in a crude state; the yards not laid out and regulated, shavings and chips from the hewed timber and the shingles, the woods grown up very thick with bushes, so that it was difficult to get through them, all contributed to give the whole a rude appearance. All this made work and amusement for the boys, who employed themselves under the supervision of the teachers in burning up the great beds of shavings, cutting openings for walks through the woods, and making arbors with seats to recreate themselves in during the warm weather."

According to the arrangement made, additional pupils were afterwards admitted, until the number was considerably above the estimated capacity of the house, being as many as one hundred of each sex at the beginning of winter. At this time there were about one hundred applications on file, and it was ordered that no more names should be registered. To meet the requirements of the growing family, other teachers were added during the summer. Ann Thomas came in the 7th mo., Elihu Pickering in the 8th mo., Ann Bacon in the 10th mo., and Enoch Lewis in the 11th mo. of 1799. The progress up to this time must have been very gratifying to those who had labored in the cause. If they foresaw in the future of the establishment a long career of usefulness, it surely was not more than they reasonably had ground to hope.

After a period of seventy-two years, it is difficult to obtain an insight into the daily life of the inmates of the house. At first the galleries were used as collecting-rooms, and the children stood during the periods in which they were there assembled. Rooms on the first floor were afterwards used for this purpose, which were furnished with benches without backs, on which the pupils sat closely side by side, without desks. Dining-rooms were in the basement, as also the laundry. The tables were doubtless furnished in a simple manner. There are those who still remember the large drinking-cups which used to be passed up and down the long bare tables to accommodate all who were thirsty, one or two sufficing for all. There were no wash-rooms, but the pumps in the yard furnished water, to which the children carried their basins and took turns before the spout, and where morning ablutions in winter were probably quickly performed. One pump was in the space where the boys' bath-house now stands; another in the same relative situation at the opposite end of the house. No pupils entered this school for a less time than one year, and two months' notice was required before a child was removed. When a vacancy occurred, the next applicant on the list was admitted to fill it. There were no vacations. Children when entered were expected to remain until they had completed their studies. Being thus debarred from the opportunity of going home, the services of the tailor and shoemaker were often needed, who resided in the house, and kept their accounts with each scholar.*

Teachers, if they had any vacation, were released one at a time. The salaries during the first year were as follows: Male teachers, £100 = $266, and if married, a house to live in beside; female teachers, £30 = $80.

*As illustrating this, observe the following; being the sundries charged to one of the first twenty boys:

Persons visiting the school were, as now, accommodated at the farm-house. The committee were desirous that this latter "should not be viewed as a tavern, where arbitrary conduct in calling for meals, commanding the servants, etc., is often observed, but that, as much as possible, a Christian and meek deportment be maintained; that the table be provided with victuals, plain cooked, and served in a decent way, merely for needful accommodation, avoiding all profusion and unnecessary expense."

Richard and Hannah Hartshorne, believing they felt released from further care at the school, retired about the close of the year 1799. Some members of the committee assisted in the oversight of the family until 4th mo., 1800, when Joshua and Ann Sharpless assumed the charge as superintendents. The experience of a year now began to make manifest the further wants of the establishment. Women Friends, having observed the inconveniences to which the sick were exposed in the apartments allotted for their use, proposed, and were encouraged to raise a sum of money principally among themselves, and erect an infirmary, in which such cases might be treated, at a suitable distance from the main building. With funds principally procured by private contributions, a building was erected on the south side of the lane, in the summer of 1803. Rooms in the basement were appropriated to the tailor and shoemaker of the institution, leaving the upper portions of the main building to be devoted to the family proper. This infirmary was never used to any considerable extent as originally designed. The expense and difficulty of supporting two separate nurseries at a distance from the remainder of the family were sufficient to prevent the house from being thus used. It has, however, been occupied as a residence for married teachers, by whom members of the committee were temporarily accommodated when in attendance at the school.

About this period, another improvement was projected and carried out. Difficulty having been experienced in getting the wheat converted into flour for so large a family, twelve Friends formed a company in 11th mo., 1800, and put up a grist-mill, with the requisite dam and race for securing power from the water of Chester Creek, taking the usual toll from all grain ground. The mill eventually passed into the ownership of the school, some shares being donated and some purchased, and has been in successful operation since. In 1815, a pump was attached to the wheel to force water up for the supply of the school.

While the institution was thus acquiring valuable additions, it was not exempt from sore trials. In the spring of 1801, as also in the autumn of 1803, sickness* prevailed to such an extent that parents were allowed to remove the children for a short time. The number in attendance was so far reduced that for the year ending 4th mo., 1803, only one hundred and thirty pupils were reported. It was a period of some discouragement to the friends of the institution, in alluding to which, the committee say:

"As many engagements, however clearly directed in their origin, and in early progress attended with confirming evidence of their rectitude, are subject to the introduction of discouraging prospects and consequently close exercises, so in the prosecution of this religious concern, the minds of the committee have not been without a share of trials of this kind."

*Scarlet fever.

A few months later:

"The minds of Friends were turned to the general state of the school, so far as relates to morals, manners, and religious education of the youth; and it being apprehended there is ground to fear that the improvement of the rising generation, so much desired, and for which this institution, as one means, was originally designed to promote, is not advancing in such a degree as to afford a satisfactory prospect to many concerned minds, it is hoped the importance of this deeply interesting subject may claim the weighty consideration of Friends generally; and that we of the committee, to whom the concern of the Yearly Meeting has been more particularly intrusted, may solidly ponder and carefully examine how far our duty has been performed, that should a greater portion of our time, and more earnest exertion of endeavors be pointed out to individuals, it is desired that a faithful dedication of talents in a cause of such importance may be rendered, under a hope that so benevolent a work will be rewarded with the comfortable enjoyment of true peace."

One source of discouragement, during the years 1802–3–4, was the weak force of men teachers, and the difficulty of obtaining others. Assistant teachers, then called "apprentices," were now first proposed, as a means of lightening the labors of the principal teachers, and also as likely to lead more persons to qualify themselves for the profession of teaching. It was also hoped "that any members of the standing committee having a concern to give up a portion of their time to be spent at the school for the furtherance of good order and decorum amongst the children there, be encouraged to offer themselves to the acting committee for this end." Thomas Scattergood at one time remained in the school for some months, aiding in the labor of instruction, as well as by his advice and religious exercise.

The following extracts from the minutes and reports of the committee further show the religious concern which was maintained:

9th mo., 1805: "In the evening a season of solemn religious waiting with the scholars, teachers, and various care-takers was experienced, in which the minds of some of the committee were qualified by Divine Goodness to communicate pertinent counsel, calculated to encourage the superintendent and teachers in the performance of their arduous duties, and the children to submit themselves to wholesome discipline."

3d mo., 1807: "We can inform the meeting that an improvement in salutary order and discipline has been pleasingly observable, and an encouraging hope revives, that as the exercise which led into this undertaking for the advancement of the youth in piety and virtue is singly kept to, the propitious eye of Divine regard will support under the various difficulties and trials with which this and other works of righteousness are frequently assailed."

CHAPTER II.

1805—1872.

THE institution was now in successful operation, and changes were more gradual. Although the Westtown of the present day is strikingly different from the Westtown of 1805, the record of the various alterations and improvements could scarcely be woven into a connected history. A slight mention of some of the more striking changes will be attempted. In the year 1809 a slight fire in one of the rooms warned the inmates of the danger which threatened them, and led to the employment of a watchman to patrol the house, and to the procuring of a supply of fire-buckets.

The boys' play-shed was erected the same year. About the year 1811, the want of additional room, especially for the boys, began to be felt. A subscription was set on foot, with the design of raising a sum sufficient to extend the main building East and West a distance of thirty feet. The East, or boys' wing, was ready for use in 1813. The basement was used at first for storing wood, afterward as a wash-room. The first floor was divided into two school-rooms; and the second floor eventually became the room for the meetings for worship of the family. The erection of the western wing was delayed some years for want of funds. The small tenement opposite the end of the lane came into the possession of the school in 1811. It being feared that this property would be used for purposes injurious to the interests of the students, the stone building now there, and a few acres of land attached, were purchased by the committee, and it has since been the residence of some of the married teachers, or others connected with the school.

During a period of several subsequent years, little change was made in the surroundings of the institution. Internally, however, it was gradually undergoing transformations to adapt it more fully to the end designed. Efforts were made to secure the more complete classification of the scholars, as well as to procure better text-books for their use. The range of studies was gradually enlarged in conformity with the general improvements in education. The desire of some scholars to pursue the study of the Latin and Greek languages, led to the employment of a regular classical teacher in 1830.

The following extract from a report of the committee in 1824, gives a pleasing view of the results obtained up to this period in one very important direction:

"Among the many advantages which it was contemplated would accrue from an institution of this description, several of both sexes have so profited by the course of studies and the mode of instruction thus derived as to be qualified for teachers of schools in many parts of the country; and so far as can at present be ascertained, the number who have thus devoted a part of their time and talents is at least sixty-nine young men and one hundred and eighty-one young women, the ability and example of many of whom, we trust, have diffused such views of the economy and management of schools, as have tended to raise in due estimation this important and highly useful occupation."

Up to this period, the number of children admitted had been 3,482, viz., 1,337 boys, and 2,145 girls.

The troubles of 1827–8, growing out of a defection in principle among members of the Society of Friends, were felt at Westtown, as elsewhere, very severely. A spirit of insubordination showed itself among the boys, which was a source of great anxiety and care to the officers and committee, as also to many parents. Careful and persevering labor on the part of those immediately concerned, was eventually followed by a more satisfactory state of things among the students. It was found necessary to remove a few from the school, and with a view to promote order among those remaining, some members of the committee spent a portion of their time at the institution.

The following extract from a report of the committee shows the feelings experienced at this depressing and critical period by deeply exercised Friends, who were then charged with the oversight of the institution. After stating some particulars connected with the recent disorder, they remark:

"Discouraging as this representation may appear, we have a hope that by patient, persevering labor, under the guidance of Divine Wisdom, who has, we believe, in great condescension regarded this seminary as an effort towards the promotion of righteousness and truth in the earth, a much better and more comfortable state may be effected, and many of the children, as heretofore, have, with grateful hearts, to acknowledge the benefits and solid advantages derived to them by being placed under the concern and guardianship of the Yearly Meeting."

After the separation of 1827, it was found that Westtown School was even more indispensable than before to the Society. Friends in many sections of the country were left few in number, and so scattered in location that it was difficult to support the requisite neighborhood schools of a select character.

The difficulties of such Friends claimed the serious attention of the Yearly Meeting in 1830, and many looked to Westtown as being the best means for remedying the evils likely to result from the crippled condition of the schools. It was finally decided to reduce the charge from $80 to $60 per year, in order that pecuniary considerations should not deter any from deriving such advantages as the school afforded. Such a low charge, it was foreseen, would be attended with a deficiency in the funds of the school, and it was recommended that such deficit should be made up by the meeting at large.*

*As expected, a deficiency in the funds resulted from the reduction in the amount charged. During the period from 1830 to 1836, it was calculated that each student only paid about four-fifths of the actual expense incurred on his account. The amount undercharged

For some years following, the school was in a very crowded condition. This made some addition to the building necessary. The long-delayed west wing was erected and brought into use in 1833. The increased labors of the instructors, from the additional number of students, and from the more comprehensive course of instruction required, led to the employment, in 1831, of persons whose special business it was to have charge over the pupils in the intervals of school. Davis Reece was the first governor and Hannah Wood the first governess. Their appointment was an experiment, which, proving satisfactory, has been continued.

In 1832–3, the cholera raged in and around Philadelphia with violence. A report of the committee to the Yearly Meeting in 1833, makes the following mention of it:

"In alluding to the occurrences of the past year, the committee feel it to be cause of gratitude to the Preserver of men that the institution has escaped the epidemic which has so extensively prevailed throughout our country. Although much may be attributed to the healthfulness of the situation, and the salutary regulations exercised over the scholars, yet we cannot but acknowledge the exemption as an evidence of the preserving care of that beneficent Providence to whom we owe all our blessings. Several cases of the cholera having occurred in the vicinity of the school, and the rapid course of the disease rendering prompt medical advice necessary, the committee deemed it expedient to employ a physician to reside for a time on the farm, and also to engage experienced nurses to attend at the institution during this time was over eighteen thousand dollars; this, with the expense of erecting the west wing, and other permanent improvements, at a cost of about eight thousand dollars, made it necessary for the Yearly Meeting to raise a considerable amount to cancel the remaining indebtedness.

should their services be required. The expense of these arrangements, we believe, was more than compensated by their influence in allaying the anxiety of parents and calming the agitation and fears which had been excited in the minds of some of the scholars."

In 1836, the committee brought before the Yearly Meeting a proposal for dividing the year into terms, with two short vacations. An experience of thirty-seven years had shown that the system of having no stated intervals of rest was attended with serious disadvantages. It was also found that the requirements of the modern mode of instruction could not be so perfectly secured as now desired without a more complete classification than was possible when students were allowed to begin or discontinue their attendance at irregular intervals. The needful relaxation to the teachers, and a better opportunity for making repairs to the property, thus afforded, were also among the reasons for recommending such a change. The proposition was adopted in the following year, and stated terms, with vacations of three weeks, which were afterwards increased to four weeks each, in the spring and autumn, were established — that in the spring including the time of the Yearly Meeting. This change proved a very satisfactory one, and it is probable that in a majority of cases as much has been accomplished in the two terms of forty-four weeks by the scholars as formerly in the fifty-two.

About this time the two collecting-rooms assumed their present form and appearance, by the removal of partitions and the addition of new desks.

Changes in and near the buildings now were made in rapid succession. A play-shed for the girls was erected in 1840. In 1846–7, a new roof was put on the main building, and at the same time the sides of the house were raised about four feet, thus giving the whole a more modern appearance than formerly. The change materially added to the comfort of the boys in their sleeping-apartment, and made it possible to secure better ventilation. At this time also the problem of providing apartments for the occasional invalids attained a satisfactory solution. A benevolent Friend * having offered to defray most of the expense, two nurseries were erected, each twenty by thirty-two feet, two stories high. At first they were connected with the galleries by narrow passage-ways, but afterward they were extended so as to reach the galleries, thus still further increasing their size. Few of the additions to the original structures have been more useful than these buildings. They were found to be well adapted to the end designed. The rooms vacated in the central building were appropriated in other ways.

The bath-house for the girls was completed about the beginning of 1850. The next year witnessed the removal of the laundry from the basement to the building specially designed for it. Both these improvements contributed to the health and comfort of the family. The buildings at the farm were undergoing extensive modifications at the same time. The farm-house itself was pronounced inadequate to the wants of the place, and was much out of repair. The barn was in like condition. The Yearly Meeting in 1849 authorized the collection of funds for the erection of new buildings to replace them, and $10,000 was soon obtained. Including the wood-house, the introduction of water, and various other improvements in and around the house (made chiefly in 1851), the cost of the farm-house was $8,474.98, and it was occupied in the early part of 1851. The remainder of the funds, with some additions, was used in erecting the proposed barn in the summer of 1853, the cost of which was $3,953. Both these buildings are large and well arranged, and have added much to the comfort of those concerned, as well as promoted the economy of the farm management.

The danger and inconvenience resulting from the use of lamps in the school building were removed, in 1854, by the erection of apparatus for the manufacture of gas, the expenses of which, as of several previous improvements, were defrayed by private individuals. The present wheel-house on the race bank, some distance above the grist-mill, was erected about this time, and the forcing-pump, which had previously been at the grist-mill, was removed to it, and a new forcing-main, consisting of fourteen hundred feet of three-inch cast-iron pipe, was laid from the wheel-house to the school. The girls' piazza was built in 1855. The boys' bath-house was completed in the same year, and both this and the girls' furnished with apparatus for heating the water. No one will question the sanitary value of these arrangements. In the years 1855–6–7, upwards of $11,000 were expended in painting and repairing the school building throughout, repairing and putting new roofs on the houses in the lane, and in making various repairs and additions to the buildings at the school, the farm-house, and the mill, among which may be particularly mentioned the new barn and carriage-house at the school. This latter was a great improvement over the old school barn, which stood nearly on the site of the present greenhouse. Of the $11,000 thus expended, $9,800 were contributed by two interested members of the committee.

In the autumn of 1858 the West Chester and Philadelphia Railroad was completed, and Street Road Station, distant one and a half miles, became the point of arrival and departure for those connected with the institution. Travel to and from the place was thus rendered much easier. At the opening, and for more than fifty years thereafter, all travel was on horseback or in carriages. While the school was without vacations, and the pupils were coming and going nearly all the time, it was seldom that many needed conveyances at any one time. Effort was made to keep up a regular stage line from Philadelphia, but it was attended with much trouble from insufficient patronage. But when the session system was introduced, and the children met in Philadelphia, and came out in stage loads, the twenty mile ride became quite an important event in the career of the Westtown scholar. The trip back to the city was a renewal of the excitement and bustle. After the branch road was built from the Pennsylvania Central to West Chester, some of the travel took that course. In 1852 the stage route was changed to meet passengers in West Chester, and so remained until the final change above mentioned diverted all travel to the new road.

The period during which the Civil War raged in this country, was not characterized by any serious depression in the operations of the school. Indeed, as an asylum for many young persons, where they were measurably free from the great excitement prevailing elsewhere, its usefulness seemed even greater.

Several pupils from those portions of the Southern States devastated by the contending armies, spent the time quietly and profitably at the school, until they could safely return home.

From 1865 to 1870 an unusually large number of pupils were occupying the various departments. This brought under notice more forcibly the want, which had been previously felt, of additional class-rooms for both sexes. The plan most in favor for remedying the difficulty, was to erect a building to accommodate the boys, and thus vacate portions of the main building for the use of the girls. Other plans were proposed, and some time elapsed before any was fully matured. No one was more interested in the movement than the then superintendent, Dubré Knight. But he at least was not permitted to assist in carrying out any of the plans. He died suddenly, on the morning of the 3d of Second month, 1868. In the course of a long life, almost wholly devoted to the cause of education, he had made many friends, and his death left a painful vacancy, not only at Westtown, but elsewhere. Joseph and Hannah Snowdon, who had before for several years acted as superintendents, temporarily filled the vacancies thus suddenly occasioned, during the remainder of the session.

The Yearly Meeting in 4th mo., 1868, authorized subscriptions for the purpose of erecting additional accommodations for the boys. A fire occurring just before, had made some rebuilding also necessary, — the boys' bath-house and play-shed having been destroyed. The contributions received amounted to $23,226. Work was at once commenced, a plan having finally been agreed upon. The school building was first used at the opening of the Winter term of 1869–70. It is situated east of and adjoining the boys' play-shed, a covered connection with the main building being thus secured; is sixty-eight by fifty-four feet in extent, with two stories devoted to school purposes, and has a basement and an attic. A large room in the basement, immediately adjoining the play-shed, affords further facility for exercise within doors during stormy weather. In the first story are a large distributing room, furnished with modern desks, and two good recitation rooms. The second story contains four rooms, devoted respectively to the primary, writing, reading, and classical schools. These rooms are well lighted, warmed, and ventilated, and have contributed much to the comfort of all, as well as the efficiency of the school arrangements. Some of the rooms vacated in the main building have been converted into recitation rooms for the girls, thus adding materially to their comfort, and others have been used in providing needed accommodations for the teachers of both departments.

The Yearly Meeting of 1869 promoted further subscriptions for the erection of a new dairy barn, which was completed in the autumn of 1869. It furnished good accommodations for sixty cows, with storage room to correspond.

CHAPTER III.

WESTTOWN AS IT IS.

THUS Westtown, as it is seen in 1872, is very different, both internally and externally, from Westtown as it was in 1800. It has experienced a gradual growth, as it were, the successive stages of which have here been but imperfectly indicated. To so meagre a history perhaps some more extended notice of the present condition of the institution may be properly added.

The Summer session opens usually on the first Second day in the Fifth month, and continues twenty-two weeks. After a vacation of four weeks, the Winter session opens about the First of the Eleventh month, and is of the same length. The vacations thus occur in the Tenth and Fourth months. Pupils are expected to assemble during the first two days of the term, and are soon organized for school work. A difference is observable between the studies pursued by the boys during the Winter and Summer sessions, owing to the fact that a large proportion of the scholars are from the rural sections, where the young men are retained at home during the Summer. The Winter is thus by far the more stirring season at Westtown. The girls' school is more uniform. The course of instruction embraces the ordinary elementary branches of a substantial education, with which a majority of the pupils, both boys and girls, are chiefly engaged. The higher mathematics, the Latin and Greek languages, and the physical sciences, are also included in the course, and receive constant attention, as class after class succeeds each other in the appointed routine.

The four weeks preceding the close of the term are occupied by a review of the work done during the session, preparatory to a general examination, which occurs during the last three days. These examinations are occasions of much interest, and the prospect thereof a useful incitement to industry on the part of the pupils.

In classifying the school, about one-fifth, including those least advanced, are placed in the introductory department, chiefly under the care of one teacher. The remainder are successively under the care of the other teachers, as their advancement and studies may make needful. An hour in the morning in Summer and one in the evening in Winter, are occupied by the recitations in grammar or other English branches. At other times the arithmetical, mathematical, and classical studies, with reading and writing, are pursued under the respective teachers of those departments. There have been efforts at various times to discontinue the primary or introductory schools, but experience has shown that while pupils are sent to Westtown at so young an age, there are manifest advantages resulting from such a division. To those who have not yet learned how to study successfully, the care of a teacher who is charged with the whole of their instruction, is quite necessary. Instances are not wanting of those who spend one term in that department outstripping in a short time those of the same age whose acquirements placed them a little higher at first and thus removed them from the close and continuous observation of one teacher.

There are in the boys' school two teachers who have charge of the mathematical studies principally, and one each in the classical, reading, writing, and introductory departments. The girls' schools are similarly divided, with the omission of the classical department, and are taught by five teachers. Spelling and grammar, natural philosophy and chemistry, and other branches, are attended to by the respective teachers in accordance with the numbers, proficiency of pupils, etc., etc.

In the intervals between school-hours the students are principally under the care of the governor and governess. Though children are not sent to Westtown in search of recreation, yet the various amusements resorted to are of no slight importance. The absolute necessity of some provision of the kind in any system of education is fully recognized. But little attention has been paid to gymnastic or calisthenic exercises, but this is largely compensated for by the free access to the fine walks and extensive playgrounds which they enjoy. In Summer the boys have their frequent games of ball, and the girls other lighter games. Not least among the attractions of the place for the young are the facilities for long rambles near Chester Creek and around Walnut Hill.

The large farm, traversed by the winding creek and mill race, and still covered in several parts by woodland, contains many a sequestered and sunny haunt, well known to all Westonians, and connected perhaps with not a few of the cherished reminiscences of their childhood.

Nor must we forget the skating-pond — an area of four acres, which can be flooded, and which, when cold weather comes, affords such exhilarating exercise for both boys and girls. The swimming-pond for the boys is near the same spot, and is a source of much enjoyment during the Summer season. Among Winter sports, football is pre-eminent with the boys, though many minor games, such as are common to all schools, are also very popular. There can be no doubt that such exercises with the pupils contribute largely to the general good health enjoyed by the inmates of the establishment. Deaths in the family have not been more frequent than one in four years, on an average, since 1800, which surely, among so many, is not a large number.

Meetings for worship are held in the house on First and Fifth days. Through the Scripture recitations, religious readings, and the personal association of the officers with the students, as well as the labors of the members of the committee, efforts are made to instil into them correct rules of action, and the principles of a sound moral character, and also a practical acquaintance with the doctrines and testimonies of the gospel as held by the Society of Friends. Whatever may be the degree of success in these respects, although there may be among those who leave the school some who show little evidence of religious improvement by a sojourn there, cases are in no wise infrequent, now as formerly, of those who attribute seasons of just growth in the best life to the instructions received and the influences thrown around them while at Westtown. The feeling of personal responsibility which of late years animates many of the students — a feeling which has found expression in a system of self-restraint, devised by the students for their own regulation in certain respects — has been, and continues to be, one of the most encouraging signs of the progress in the right direction.

The institution also affords other fields for the mental improvement than those of the recitation room alone. The "Westtown Literary Society," organized in 1836 by the men teachers and older students, continues to be a source of great interest and usefulness. A monthly paper, called the "Cabinet," has been published for years, and the successive bound volumes are preserved by the Society. A collection of specimens in natural history, chiefly collected and prepared by the first governor, D. Reece, came into the possession of the organization in 1865, and is made the special care of a standing committee. The "Lyonian Literary Society" is a similar association among the females of the institution. It was organized in 1869, — publishes a paper called the "Casket," and has fully vindicated its claim to an enumeration among the established features of the place. The library of the school now numbers near twenty-seven hundred volumes. The formation of the collection began in 1806, at which time it was under the care of one of the larger boys. For many years the books were kept in the Superintendent's office. The addition of about one thousand volumes in 1856 gave it a greater value, and it was then placed in another room where cases had been prepared for it, and a catalogue of the books then composing it was printed; since that time additions have been made to it annually. As worthless and fictitious books are carefully excluded, the library possesses a solid value, far greater than many more numerous collections. The pupils have frequent access to it under reasonable restrictions.

In every department of the institution there continues to be a special and personal oversight by members of the Yearly Meeting's Committee. Originally that body appointed an acting committee of ten members, who had the entire supervision of all the departments. More recently, a system of rotation in the appointment of visiting committees has been adopted, which brings all the members to the institution, either in person or by substitute, in the course of the year. There are also important sub-committees, specially intrusted with certain duties. Principally among these are the "Instruction," "Farm," "Admission's," and "Household" Committees, each of which reports to the general committee.

Mention has been made of the large farm belonging to the institution. With the exception of about thirty-five acres immediately surrounding the school buildings, used for gardens, orchard, playground, lawn, etc., the whole of it is under the care of the "farmer," who keeps a separate account with the school proper, and is subordinate to the farm committee. The experiment has been tried, of letting it to the shares, but latterly the person in charge is paid a salary for his services.

The general plan of managing the finances has been to strive for the "greatest good of the greatest number." This has been the chief reason for keeping the price of board and tuition at the lowest possible rate. The present price is $75 per session, which is much less than the cost. The deficiency is in part met by the profits of the farm, and the income of invested funds, and in part by appropriations from the Yearly Meeting.

Westtown then can, in no sense, be regarded as devoted to the accumulation of money. Generally there is a financial deficit. The donations and bequests of Friends interested in education have accumulated a considerable fund, the income of which is used to pay for the tuition of children whose parents are unable themselves to defray the necessary expenses of board and tuition at Westtown. The fund is in this way productive of much good to many, in various parts of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, but it is not the property of the school itself. The income derived from it is not applicable to the support of the institution, except as it is received in payment for the education of children entitled to its benefit.

But it has not been to the liberal donations of Friends alone, or even to them principally, that the success of the school has been owing. Primarily the praise is due to Him, from whom cometh every good and perfect gift, and who, while he opened the hearts of some to contribute of their worldly substance to this cause, made others willing to incur the labor, anxiety, and religious exercise inseparable from the right management of such a concern. The continuance of this success will much depend on the maintenance in the hearts of Friends of that earnest desire for the preservation and true welfare of the children, which encouraged many in time past to labor faithfully for their good. If a succession of such honest and devoted laborers can be preserved, on the committee, and in the officers entrusted with the care of this school, there is good reason to hope that the belief expressed by one of the early and sincere friends of the institution will continue to be verified: "It is a vineyard which the Lord will bless."
